May is Mental Health Awareness Month

According to the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), mental health conditions affect millions of Americans every year. Some of the basic facts about the prevalence of mental illness indicate that about one in 25 adults in this country will experience a serious mental illness in a given year that will substantially impact or impair one or more major life activities. Also, about one in five adults in the U.S. experience some form of mental illness (almost 47 million Americans) every year. This means that if you are part of a family that includes five or more individuals, the odds are that someone in your family will experience a mental health issue this year. May is Mental Health Awareness Month, a month dedicated to raise awareness around trauma and the impact it can have on the well-being of individuals and communities. Like many conditions, as a society we should focus attention and resources to address root causes and prevention where possible. Prevention in the end is always less expensive and clearly has more positive long-term benefits for everyone, not just those afflicted. The reality, however, is that millions of Americans will continue to experience mental health issues. Many of these individuals will end up in jails and prisons because of the lack of treatment. Mental health issues are treatable and the earlier a person is able to access treatment, the better the long-term prospects are for wellness and recovery. While it is helpful to have one month designated as Mental Health Awareness Month, we should be aware every day of how this condition affects our families and communities. We should also be aware that getting people into treatment as soon as possible, leads to better long-term outcomes for all of us.
Important Work of a Peer Support Specialist

Ron has been a Certified Peer Specialist with the WCS Office of Consumer Affairs program since May 1, 2018. His work includes providing peer services for individuals in Team Connect. Team Connect is a short term program that provides follow-up services and support to individuals discharged from Milwaukee County Behavioral Health Division’s (BHD) psychiatric crisis services, observation and acute care units. The program also connects a recently discharged individual with a Peer Support Specialist. This “warm handoff” to a Peer is key to helping an individual as they reconnect with their families and their community. Other services involve identifying needed resources, getting to mental health appointments and offering the mutual connection of lived experience. Here is one of Ron’s most recent success stories:

“I just broke down one day,” Shavon said after suffering the loss of several loved ones, a car accident, and feeling overburdened at work. “I felt like I was walking in puddles at work, and the ceiling was opening and God was ready for me.” Shavon was taken by her daughters to the Psychiatric Crisis Services at Milwaukee County BHD where she was treated for her mental health needs. The services she received through BHD connected her to an outpatient medication appointment and therapy. As part of her after-care, she was connected with Ronald (whom she refers to as “Mr. Ron”).

“Mr. Ron called me, took me out for a burger, and we talked,” Shavon said. “He’s a real nice man.” Ron’s interactions with Shavon have helped to reduce her tendency to isolate by getting out into the community again. This included Ron connecting Shavon to additional social outlets in the community and resources to support her recovery. Ron’s compassionate and empathetic approach allowed him to quickly build rapport with Shavon. He took the time to listen to her needs and develop rapport through their connection. Shavon is very grateful for Mr. Ron’s help and she credits her success to the supportive people in her life.

WCS Employee Honored by Waukesha County Bar Association

WCS employee, JoAnn Eiring, received the Community Service Award from the Waukesha County Bar Association as they honored her at their Annual Meeting and Awards banquet on May 14, 2019. The Honorable Laura L. Lau presented the award to JoAnn, recognizing her numerous professional achievements over her career as both a WCS employee and in her role as Municipal Judge for Brookfield. In addition to recognizing her extensive achievements, JoAnn was hailed as a hero for her extensive community service work which includes being a long-time youth mentor, volunteering in the NICU, her selfless act of donating a kidney, and her efforts to promote organ donation. WCS is proud to have JoAnn on our team!
